MoMA Access Programs
The Museum of Modern Art

Lara Schweller, PhD
Coordinator of Community and Access Programs
Cultural participation is a fundamental part of the human experience and yet people with disabilities are often denied equal participation.
It is time for a cultural shift.
MoMA has led over 200 accessibility trainings worldwide.
Our Replication Plan

MoMA provides training that will empower staff to create an accessible museum.
Our Replication Plan

MoMA provides training that will empower staff to create an accessible museum.

Option 1:
MoMA provides free resources online.
Our Replication Plan

MoMA provides training that will empower staff to create an accessible museum.

Option 2:
MoMA offers a subscription to webinar training courses and additional online support.
Our Replication Plan

MoMA provides training that will empower staff to create an accessible museum.

Option 3:
MoMA travels to your institution to provide customized trainings.
Our Replication Plan

MoMA provides training that will empower staff to create an accessible museum.

Option 3: MoMA travels to your institution to provide customized trainings.

Your institution receives customized training and also hosts a summit for area museums.
Our Replication Plan

MoMA provides training that will empower staff to create an accessible museum.

Option 3:

MoMA travels to your institution to provide customized trainings.

Your institution receives customized training and also hosts a summit for area museums.

This fosters a new network of accessibility resources in your region.
Our Need

- New cultural institutions willing to be partners in our training in becoming more accessible

- Research institutions interested in further measuring the impact of accessibility training in the cultural sphere
Contact Us

moma.org/access

Lara Schweller
Coordinator of Community and Access Programs
The Museum of Modern Art
Lara_Schweller@moma.org